TAFT LAUDS THE ATTITUDE OF WILSON

Twenty thousand sailors and nine hundred officers.

"Second, an increase in ammunition for our great coast defense guns, the making of a few 16-inch guns, and the completion of the defenses of the Shipyard at Cape Henry. In addition an increase of 10,000 trained coast artillerymen and 600 officers to man the coast defenses properly.

"Third, an increase in our regular army of 50,000, and a quadrupling of the supply of educated military officers. We should also adopt a reduced term of enlistment with the inducement to the formation of a reserve of trained men."

He then pointed out that to carry out such preparations would cost a large sum of money and that the treasury of the United States is not in a condition to warrant such expenditures.

"The program I have proposed," he said, "modest as it is, will certainly increase the annual total of the army and navy appropriations by $150,000,000, perhaps $150,000,000 for each of three first years and probably more."

"This leaves $325,000,000 at least of necessary income to be provided for by new legislation of Congress over and above what existing law would probably produce. This could be partly made up by the renewal of the war tax and of the sugar tax, yielding, say, $125,000,000. There should be left from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 of a deficit still to be provided for by additional taxation."

Mr. Taft pointed out that expenses should be cut down by giving authority and responsibility to one body of men to consider the whole field of government income and expenditure.

A large sum, he said, would under any circumstances have to be raised by taxation. As a Republican, he said, he believed that a change of policy to a higher protective tariff would serve most satisfactorily but that he would not urge it because:

"I am trying to make practical suggestions and not a partisan speech and I am looking to what may reasonably be demanded of a patriotic Democratic Congress in view of the present imperative need of increasing our national income and their anti-protection views."

"The imposition of a small tax on small incomes asks a sacrifice from our patriotic citizens that they will be willing to make if our politicians have the courage to impose it and to explain the imperative necessity."

"The payment of a tax, however, makes a man a better citizen. To assume that the plain people are unwilling to pay increased taxes in case of national need is to distrust them and to ascribe to them the lowest motive for political action."

"Let us exclude politics from the question of preparedness. Let us accept the cost. Let us insist that Congress and the Administration manifest the courage to incur the odium of unthinking and unpatriotic men who would resent contributing to such a cause. Let us insist that the Congress and the Administration manifest the judgment of real expert naval and army officers and boards as to how we should prepare and shall not allow the dangerous little knowledge of committee chairman and civilian politicians, ignorant of our needs, to obstruct the work of proper national defense."

"The payment of a tax, however, makes a man a better citizen. To assume that the plain people are unwilling to pay increased taxes in case of national need is to distrust them and to ascribe to them the lowest motive for political action."
